Age 60

Roy A. Mulford died on June 22, 2014 at age 60 in the Cleveland, Ohio area.

He was survived by his siblings Susan Youngs (James), Patrice Reeves, Lauriann Gagnon Heina, Richard Rollin (Lynn), and Jeannie Wagner (Curt), as well as many nieces and nephews. Roy was preceded in death by his parents Robert Mulford, Barbara Brown, and Lillian Mulford, and his brother Larry Gagnon.

One of our classmates shared this memory: "I remember Roy as a friend and hung out with him from late junior high through high school. He was a mischievous youth as was I, and we bonded in a sense of adventure. We became avid 10-speed bicyclists together, although I preferred touring and he liked racing. He was also an accomplished silversmith while still in high school, and we both did some collaboration on designs at the Electric Candle, a sort of hippie gift store in Lakewood. I will remember him fondly as a friend in an era that was both innocent and full of youthful folly."

A friend recalled when she first met Roy: "One of my very best memories is the day I met Roy for the first time in the early 80s at the Hessler Street Fair. He was dancing to the reggae band It Tal. He was a handsome, impish young man, so full of life and laughter."

Another classmate remembered Roy: "Roy and I went to Hayes Elementary School together. He was good-hearted and lots of fun."
